The Golden State Manufactured-Home Owners League (GSMOL) is a non-profit organization formed almost 60 years ago to protect the home values and quality of life of Mobile Home owners. In addition to working with the State of California and local legislatures, GSMOL works daily at the State level lobbying for legislation that will benefit Mobile Home owners. Through our Emergency Legal Fund (ELF), GSMOL pursues violations of the Mobilehome Residency Law (MRL798…) which protects Mobile Home owners.

To help GSMOL continue to provide these and other services,

November Health Tips

Connect with your family this fall while bettering your health.

1-Minute Tip: Send a quick text to a relative to see how they're doing! Not only can this brighten their day, but it can also improve your own.

5-Minute Tip: Update your emergency contact information. Did you know that most phones nowadays let you set certain contacts as emergency contacts? Take a couple minutes to update the emergency info in your phone.

15-Minute Tip: Update your online medical records. Did you receive a flu shot, or COVID-19 vaccine recently? Upload this information online so that it's easily accessible to you, your family and your providers.

30-Minute Tip: Take advantage of holiday gatherings to expand on your family health history. Ask questions and utilize this time to collect information on what diseases, conditions and ailments run in your family. This information can be used to update your family history at your next doctor appointment.

Why Strength Training is a Must as We Get Older

by Dr. Scott Lear

Maintaining one's strength is of great importance as we age. However, the common trend is to do less as we age. Much of it is unconscious, but at the same time voluntary. In our jobs, there's usually a trend from early to late career of more to less activity. It's also common to downsize once in retirement. This often means less of a yard (or no yard) and fewer stairs in the house. The result? Less activity.

The problem with declining activity is it can lead to an ongoing cycle of further declines, loss of independence and poor health. As our activity levels decrease, so does our strength and fitness. This may lead to further declines in activity as common activities become more difficult. Often we think the extra effort needed to do the same tasks as we get older is due to age. In fact it's mostly due to a lower level of fitness from doing less activity. If this cycle continues, then performing general activities of daily living such as laundry, stocking the pantry, going grocery shopping and washing dishes, will become a challenge and make independent living difficult.

Benefits of Strength Training

The good news is that regular activity and exercise can help prevent muscle loss and is considered one of the better treatments for it. Strength training can also improve balance and coordination. Much of the initial gains in strength come from increased coordination. This improved coordination is important to reduce chances of falling. More than one in four people over 65 years fall each year in the US. And about 1 in 5 falls results in an injury such as a hip fractures or head injury. Exercise is considered one of the best ways to reduce fall risk.

Other benefits from strength training include reducing arthritis pain, improving sleep, strengthening bones and reducing back pain. And just 12 weeks of strength training (three times per week) resulted in improved quality of life in people >60 years. A similar program has also proven effective at treating depression. And even if you're a regular runner, walker or cyclist, adding strength training may help prevent overuse injury.

Getting Started

It doesn't take much to keep up one's strength or regain it back. And you don't need to go to a gym to do it (although you can if you wish). It can be done in your own home. Simple exercises like arm raises with light weights (something like 2-10 lbs is fine, even soup cans or water bottles) improve upper body strength and make it easier getting those plates down from the kitchen cupboards. There are numerous YouTube videos that you can look up to get ideas.

> And every little bit counts. And remember to warm-up as well.

It's also never too late to start. There are plenty of inspirational stories of people starting strength training later in life. Even people over 90 years of age can benefit. Strength training improves the ability to get up and out of your chair. For many of us, that may seem like a simple task now, but struggling to get up out of a chair is common in later life and substantially limits a person's independence and quality of life.

New Earthquake Fault Discovered

by Peter Cleveland

This column is being written before the annual Great California Shakeout, so we can't give you any results on that until next month.

In the mean time, there are several topics of interest.

Perhaps the first is the discovery of yet another fault system in our area. We're all familiar with the San Andreas fault, which caused the great earthquake of 1906, and the Hayward Fault, which runs within a couple of miles of Mission Bay, is the one most likely to cause a destructive quake here, and is so close that the earthquake early warning system will be useless to us when that happens.

But the new one is in Silicon Valley.

According to the San Francisco Chronicle, "The faults are the Shannon-Monte Vista Fault and Berrocal-Sargent Fault; they are collectively known as the Foothill Thrust Belt faults. They lie east of the San Andreas Fault and span the inner edge of the Sierra Azul mountain range." One end of the fault system is south of Gilroy; the system extends from there up through Silicon Valley and past Palo Alto.

Scientific calculations show that enough stress builds up in this fault system to cause a quake every 250 to 300 years; the problem is that no one knows what that means. Still, it's something to think about (along with sea level rise and all the other natural disasters).

In the mean time, there was a 4.8-magnitude quake off the coast on September 24, about 48 miles southwest of Eureka. This came 11 days after a 4.3 temblor near Santa Rosa. Nothing to get excited about, but a reminder that the earth remains active in California, and we should be prepared.

發現新地震斷層

本專欄是在年度的「加州大震動」災難演習之前寫的，所以我們要到下個月才能給你演習的結果。

在此其間，有幾個你可能感興趣的話題。

首先是在我們所在地區發現了另一個斷層系統。我們都熟悉導致 1906 年大地震的 San Andreas 斷層及最有可能發生破壞性地震的 Hayward 斷層。Mission Bay 與該斷層僅有幾英里距離，所以當地震發生時，地震預警系統將對我們毫無用處。

根據舊金山紀事報，新的斷層位於矽谷，由 Shannon-Monte Vista 斷層 and Berrocal-Sargent 斷層組成，統稱為 Foothill Thrust Belt 斷層地帶。它們位於 San Andreas 斷層以東，跨越 Sierra Azul 山脈的內緣，斷層地帶的一端在 Gilroy 以南； 另一端向上延伸經矽谷通過 Palo Alto。

據科學計算顯示，當這個斷層系統每250 到 300 年積累了足夠的應壓力，就會引發一次地震。問題是沒有人知道這意味著什麼。 儘管如此，這是與海平面上升和所有其他自然災害同樣值得思考的事情。

其次是在 Santa Rosa 發生 4.3 級地震的 11 天後，在 9 月 24 日 Eureka 西南約 48 英里的海岸附近發生了 4.8 級地震。雖然震级沒什麼大不了，但提醒我們加州的地殼仍然活躍，我們應該做好準備。

Home Sweet Mobile Home

With Thanksgiving approaching and the winter holidays around the corner, there are things to look forward to (and prepare for) this time of year — even with the adjustments we are having to make because of the pandemic. Batten down the hatches for winter weather and get a jump on holiday prep, so you can relax and savor the simple pleasures of the season, like family dinners and walks in the crisp air outdoors.

Things to Check Off Your List in November

1. Check paths, stairs and railings for safety. Slips and falls can happen anywhere, but they're even more likely if the footing is uneven or a railing isn't sturdy. Take a walk around your home's exterior, paying special attention to walkways, stairs and railings, and make repairs as needed.

2. Get a jump on holiday prep. If you plan to have a special holiday meal, take a bit of time now to prepare a few things in advance. Launder and iron the fancy linens (roll up freshly ironed linens on old wrapping paper tubes to prevent wrinkles), drop off the kitchen knives for a professional sharpening or polish some silver — you'll thank yourself later.

3. Fix plumbing issues before the holiday crunch. Have a slow drain, stuck garbage disposal or finicky toilet? Don't wait until the busy holiday season, when it may be harder to find a plumber who's available. Fix it now.

4. Add Draft Guards to Exterior Doors. Draft stoppers attach to, slide under, or sit in front of your door to block the little cracks and gaps that let cold air in—and your heated air out. You can find them at just about any department store or online, depending on what kind you are looking for.

5. Inspect Your Roof. Before winter, you should have your roof inspected. You will want to check for any loose shingles, reapply sealant around any roof vents to ensure they don't leak, clear off any debris, and if you have gutters make sure they are clear of leaves to allow for rain runoff.

Holiday DIY: Mason Jar Forced Bulbs

Stephanie Rose started gardening to help pass the time while recovering from a debilitating yearlong illness. She soon caught the gardening bug, and today she is a master gardener in Vancouver, where she teaches organic gardening, food growing and garden crafts and produces her Garden Therapy blog. Rose has written a book, Garden Made: A Year of Seasonal Projects to Beautify Your Garden and Your Life (Roost Books, 2015), which features more than 40 DIY projects, including homemade paper, candles, wreaths and planters.

Bulb forcing has been a gardener's pastime since the 1800s. If you are an antiques hunter, you may have seen hyacinth glasses or forcing vases: pinched-neck glass vases with wide bottoms. Perhaps you have seen more current displays of fragrant paperwhites set in soil at a florist shop. The hobby's longevity is understandable when you come to appreciate that spring's fragrant blooms can be grown right on your windowsill, in the fall!

Forced bulbs provide a fresh, long-lasting display of bright green leaves atop a growing bulb that is decorative enough in its own right, even before the flowers appear. Here are three different ways to create gorgeous Mason jar forced bulbs: in soil, in pebbles and in water.

FORCING BULBS IN SOIL

What you'll need

Quart-size or larger Mason Jar
Clean 1/2-inch diameter stones
Indoor potting soil mix
Paperwhite bulbs

Planting bulbs in soil is the most obvious choice and makes for a stable base for tall flowers like paperwhites. Start with a clean Mason jar and line the bottom with an inch of half-inch-diameter stones. Top the stones with a few inches of soil and set a bulb in so that the neck is above the soil line. Pack soil around the bulb and press firmly in place

Water to moisten the soil but not so much that there is standing water at the bottom of the jar. If you add too much water, you can always pour it back out.

After blooming, keep the greens watered until the soil warms up enough to plant them in the spring garden. They are not likely to bloom again during the current season, but if they naturalize you will get to enjoy them in many a spring to come.

FORCING BULBS IN PEBBLES

What you'll need

Wide, pint-sized Mason jar with a regular-size mouth
Clean ½-inch-diameter stones
Prechilled hyacinth bulbs

Fill the jar to just an inch below the neck with clean stones, glass beads or decorative marbles. Nestle the bulb on the top of the stones, using a few extras to secure the bulb in place. Add water to just half an inch below the surface.

FORCING BULBS IN WATER

What you'll need

Wide, pint-sized Mason jar with a regular-sized mouth
Plastic mesh
Garden twine
Prechilled hyacinth bulbs

To force bulbs in water, create a hammock out of plastic mesh to allow the bulb to sit above the water line. Shown in the photos here is the packaging from the decorative stones I used in the pebble-forcing method, but you could also use purchased mesh or the packaging often used with onions and avocados

WEEKS TO BLOOM

Hyacinth, crocus and Muscari species (grape hyacinth), pictured below, take two to three weeks to bloom. Paperwhites take three to five weeks to bloom; amaryllis bulbs vary by species.

PRE-CHILLING BULBS

To force most bulbs indoors, they need to be prechilled, with the exceptions of amaryllis and paperwhite bulbs. The best bet is to buy prechilled bulbs at the garden center.

One way to chill bulbs is in the fridge inside a paper bag. Just be sure to keep the bag in a crisper drawer away from any other food. The idea is to trick the bulbs into starting their spring growth by faking winter. Note that each type of bulb will have a different number of weeks required for chilling. Hyacinth bulbs need one to 12 weeks of chilling. Crocus and Muscari species (grape hyacinth) need 14 to 15 weeks.

NOVEMBER GARDENING

Fall is for planting! Get shrubs, perennials and trees into the ground this month. Winter rains will help develop a strong root system.

Look to plant cyclamen in early November. It's also a great time to plant ground covers and sweet peas.

Think fall & winter color: Violas and pansies are perfect for creating mass color in containers or flowerbeds. Available in a variety of hues, they are a terrific ground cover to plant over bulbs in pots or in the ground. For a hardy alternative, consider planting ornamental cabbage and kale.

Prepare planting beds for winter. Clear weeds and rocks. Till soil and add soil amendments.

Harvest your vegetables.

Top-dress perennial beds, azaleas, camellias, and rhododendrons with Sloat Forest Mulch Plus and feed with E.B. Stone Ultra Bloom fertilizer monthly until bloom.

Store away and clean any unused pots and containers that can be used as hiding places by overwintering insects, slugs and spiders.

Lightly prune Japanese maples while still in leaf. Select and plant maples for fall color.

Clean up dead leaves, deadhead flowering plants; diseased leaves should go in the garbage, the rest can go in the compost pile.

Mulch with compost to amend the soil and keep down weeds.

Pull weeds before they have a chance to drop seeds. After it rains, weed seeds, (including grass weeds), will germinate in 5 to 10 days. Applying Safer Weed Prevention Plus or Bonide Maize ready-to-spray (both composed of corn gluten) is a safe and non-toxic way to prevent weeds from sprouting. Apply after rain in your planting beds and other areas where weeds are not wanted.
