Money Saving Tips for Seniors

Make a budget

To effectively visualize how you spend your money, especially after retiring, it is great to develop a budget. This helps you to know how to cut costs whenever you feel you are spending too much. If you use websites like Mint, you can easily understand how you spend your money on, say, entertainment, groceries, healthcare, and dining. This website allows you to keep track of your spending and it is high time you sign up for an account and start making good use of it. Once you know how you spend your money, you can then develop a budget to help you stay on track and cut costs after retirement. Visit https://mint.intuit.com/ and create an account and start setting your savings goals today.

Tips for Setting Up a Budget

Categorize Your Expenses into Monthly and Yearly Expenses.
What are your most essential expenses? How about the non-essential ones? Make sure you list down everything down.

Allocate Your Expenses Over a Full Year. Let's say you spend $400 in June of every year to pay for health insurance costs, allocate that amount on the date of the month.

Once You Have All Your Expenses and Income Listed Down, It Is Important to Add Them All Together to Find Out the Total You Have in A Year. Are your expenses higher than your income? This cannot be good at all. If this happens, ensure you revisit your budget and reduce the non-essential expenses.

Lessons From the Mendocino Quake

by Peter Cleaveland

The 6.4 earthquake that hit Mendocino County on December 20 was a reminder that big earthquakes are common. Much of the damage to houses in the affected area could have been avoided with a few simple precautions:

- Secure tall furniture.
People were injured, and property damaged, because of failure to install straps to secure things like. tall cabinets and grandfather clocks. QuakeHOLD kits are easily available at hardware stores.

- Make sure your house is bolted down
Some houses were shaken off their foundations. Bolting your house to the foundation is simple and will prevent that. Most, if not all the homes in our park are fastened down, but it' still worth remembering.

- Be prepared for utilities to fail
Electricity, water and gas in the affected area were cut off. The contents of your earthquake kit should reflect that.

- Make sure you have earthquake insurance
Regular homeowners' policies don't cover earthquakes or floods.

Mendocino 地震的教訓

12 月 20 日襲擊 Mendocino 縣的 6.4 級地震提醒我們，大地震是常有的事。該地區房屋的大部分損壞其實可通過一些簡單的預防措施來避免受影響:

• 固定高 、大件的家具。

如果不安裝帶子來固定諸如高大的儲藏櫃和座地鐘等此類的東西，地震時可導致人們受傷和財產損失。 QuakeHOLD 固定安裝套件在五金店很容易買到。

• 確保您的房子已用螺栓固定

用螺栓將你的房子固定在地基上很簡易，可以防止架在地基上的房子被震掉這種情況發生。 我們園區裡的大多數（如果不是全部的話）房屋都已固定，但此舉仍然值得謹記。

• 為水、電公用設施故障做好準備

您的地震工具包內要有應對災區停電、停水、停煤氣時的物品。

• 確保您有地震保險

普通房主的保險單並不包括地震或洪水所引至的損失。

Health Matters

Did you know that heart disease is the leading cause of death for both men and women in the United States? Celebrate American Heart Month this February by making small, impactful changes in your everyday life to promote a heart-healthy lifestyle.

1-Minute Tip: Season with spice. Instead of reaching for the salt to add that extra zip, consider using a spice. Eating highly salted foods raises the sodium content in your bloodstream which can increase your blood pressure. High blood pressure results in an increased risk for heart attacks and strokes, so think twice before adding more salt.

5-Minute Tip: Schedule a screening. Starting at age 18, it's important to get your blood pressure checked regularly. If it's been a while since your last check-up, take five minutes and schedule an appointment with your doctor. You can also check out El Camino Health's events page for our next no-charge, no-appointment-necessary screening.

15-Minute Tip: Create a daily menu. Sit down for 15 minutes each evening and write out a menu for the next day. When selecting foods for each snack and meal, emphasize vegetables, fruits and whole grains. Choose lean protein sources, such as fish or chicken, and healthy fats like avocados or nuts. Making a conscious effort to stick to this menu will have you on your way to a heart-healthy diet in no time.

30-Minute Tip: Mix up the motion. Consistent exercise can lower your blood pressure and cholesterol as well as help maintain a healthy weight. The Surgeon General recommends getting two and a half hours of moderate-intensity exercise every week. So get up and get moving — even a short burst of exercise every day adds up! Throw on your favorite playlist for 30 minutes and dance like nobody's watching. Mix it up the next day by catching up with a friend while taking a 30 minute power walk.

7 Secrets to a Successful Relationship After 50

by Andrea Brandt Ph.D. M.F.T. from Psychology Today

Whether you've been with the same person for 30 years or you're finding new love half a century into your life, it's always the right time to brush up on your relationship skills or learn new ones. Maybe things have gotten stagnant with your spouse, or maybe you've found that dating has changed since you last tried it.

It's never too late to learn these seven secrets to a successful relationship after fifty.

1. Open your heart fearlessly. To be successful in a relationship, you can't be afraid to be yourself and share yourself. Real love requires honesty—about who you are, what you believe, how you feel, and what you want. Total commitment to reality and honesty supports the integrity of a relationship. You must be open and willing to share, listen, and understand.

2. Create emotional safety. Healthy relationships depend on both parties feeling safe with each other, trusting that you are there for each other. Your circle of trust gets more important as you get older and as you must cope with the changes and anxieties that aging involves.

3. Address conflict in a spirit of love. A successful relationship requires successful conflict. Approach every disagreement with the intention to listen fully and respond in a spirit of love. Instead of responding in a knee-jerk way when your partner says or does something that upsets you, examine your feelings and mindfully consider what the other person said. It may surprise you how big a gulf there can be between what you think you heard—what you feel you heard—and what your partner actually said. Listen as much or maybe more than you talk, focus on common threads rather than differences, and look for a solution that pleases both of you.

4. Practice positive communication. The way you communicate with your partner is vital because what you say—and how you say it—affects how your significant other feels, and emotions drive behavior. Some key principles of positive communication:

Avoid negative language. When you use words like no and don't, you invoke your partner's natural resistance to being controlled. Instead, tell your partner what you want rather than what you don't want.
Avoid criticism. Remember: Success builds success. Instead of focusing on the things you dislike about your partner, focus first on what he or she does well and connect that to the behavior you'd like to see him or her change.

Give your undivided attention. One of the biggest mistakes I see couples make is that even when they both have the best intentions and follow all the advice they've read online about communication ("I" statements, etc.), they'll answer their cell phone or glance at a text message while talking to their partner. This seemingly small behavior has a big impact on how you make your partner feel. As a marriage and family therapist, the advice I give to all my patients is this: Give someone the focus they deserve.
Tell them what they mean to you. Sometimes you may start to think that your partner can read your heart and you don't need words. Totally not true. Words are still necessary. Consciously choose to actively show appreciation—finding things to appreciate in your partner to enhance the good feelings between you.

5. Support your partner's independence. No matter how close you are to your significant other, you remain individuals with your own needs and interests. Spending time alone doing your own thing shows mutual respect, not relationship strain. Advocate for your partner's goals, and accept and support each other's life goals.

6. Enjoy special time together. Don't forget to have fun together. It's important to go on new adventures and try new things. Don't have a typical "date night." Instead of dinner and a movie, take a class together or go on a day trip somewhere. As you grow older and face mortality, your relationship with your significant other provides an opportunity to explore your humanity and seek a better and deeper understanding of life.

7. Build a relationship with yourself. The relationship we have with ourselves is the key to success for all the relationships we build with others. When you are happy and fulfilled independent of others, you are most attractive to the kind of healthy, happy people you want in your life.

If you're dating for the first time in a long time, don't be afraid to wear your heart on your sleeve. It's the only way people will know what you want and what you're about. If you're celebrating your golden wedding anniversary, remember that even though it may feel you and your partner are one person, you still need to say, "I love you" and show your appreciation. Show affection. Have fun.

Your February Home Checklist

February is a time of year to indulge in home comforts like cooking big-batch meals, reading in the afternoon and watching movies with the family. Here are some ideas to add to your to-do list this month, from the necessary to the just-for-fun (treating yourself to weekly flowers).

1. Pack up a bag of old sheets and towels to donate. If you bought new sheets or towels during January white sales, make some room by letting go of an old set or two. Homeless shelters and some churches will accept donations of bedding and towels in good condition, and animal shelters are often in need of towels. (Check that donations are being currently accepted.) Really worn linens can be cut up and used as rags or dropped in a textile recycling bin.

2. Cook to stock up your freezer. A few hours of cooking on a weekend can produce major dividends if you focus your efforts on big-batch suppers that can be frozen and reheated later.

Knowing that you have homemade soup, stew, chili or casseroles in the freezer makes facing weeknight dinners much less stressful. Just add crusty bread and a simple salad and dinner will be ready in no time.

3. Organize bookshelves. Pull out volumes that you didn't enjoy or are finished with and sell or donate them, leaving a bit of extra room on each shelf for new titles. And if you get distracted by beloved old books you had forgotten about, just roll with it. After all, there are few better places to spend a winter afternoon than in a comfortable chair with a good book.

4. Clean the dryer vent (and check for blockages outside). Having the buildup of lint cleaned from your dryer vent at least once a year is essential to keeping your dryer working efficiently and preventing a potential dryer fire.

February Gardening Tips

How to Amend Your Soil by Greg Speichert

A beautiful garden starts from the ground up

Clay soil exists in much of the United States. It becomes oversaturated during rainy seasons but retains little water during dry spells—both of which cause problems for many plant species.

How to Improve Soil

Soil is a combination of organic material, silt, sand, and clay. Clay is a special problem in that it can become very hard, too wet, or too dry very easily.

You'll need: Sand, Hard work cloth, fine wood chips, sifted, Compost, Leaves, wet or dry, Shovel, Rototiller if you have one

Steps to amend soil

Break up the ground. The best recommendation is to do "double digging," which means to loosen the ground to the depth of two shovels.

Add the sand to the ground.

Add your organic matter one at a time, and mix it in (wood chips, compost, and leaves—the order doesn't matter).

Turn everything over, and incorporate all materials evenly, mixing it together with the sand/soil mix.

If you have one, use a rototiller to till the soil; otherwise keep using your shovel with the double-digging method, or use a broad fork or some other tool to help break everything up.

*Greg Speichert of Hill Top Gardens at the University of Indiana shows us how to amend soil. Indiana has a lot of clay-heavy soil. To watch a video of how it's done: https://www.finegardening.com/article/how-to-amend-your-soil
