Money Saving Tips for Seniors

Almost half of adults in the United States— nearly 42 percent to be exact— don't have any retirement savings and plan on living off their social security benefits alone. Living off that kind of monthly income is difficult. Here are a few money-saving tips to help you maximize your retirement finances to get the most out of your golden years.

Finding Free Fun

Are you an avid reader? Science has shown that reading is a powerful way for seniors to stave off cognitive decline or illnesses like dementia or Alzheimer's care. How can you keep your hobby on a budget? Instead of spending money buying books on Amazon each month, take a trip to your local library! Not only can you check out books, but also DVDs, CDs, and digital copies for your e-reader. Plus the library has daily free classes, social activities, and free Wi-Fi for the public.

Pruning Nonessential Expenses

Do you have a weekly subscription to The New Yorker? Season tickets to the local baseball team? Two cars at home when only one is really necessary? Financial experts suggest that nonessential expenses comprise no more than 30 percent of your monthly income. Is that number realistic to you? That depends on what encompasses the remaining 70 percent. Rethink your habits so you can properly identify what is nonessential.

Could The Turkish Quake Happen Here?

by Peter Cleaveland

The magnitude 7.8 earthquake that struck Turkey and Syria on February 6 was similar in magnitude to the 1906 San Francisco quake. But there are a few differences between those quakes and what would be likely here today.

TV coverage of the disaster zone shows many buildings that have totally collapsed right next to others that look relatively intact. The difference? Construction methods. Many destroyed buildings look as if they were built of unreinforced concrete, while others look as if their steel reinforcing is minimal. We don't know when the destroyed or badly damaged buildings were built, but it is not as if Turkey has had no experience with earthquakes: There have been about 60 significant ones (magnitude 6.0 or greater) in that country since 1900 — certainly long enough to establish proper building codes. California has had about the same number of quakes, but has enacted and enforced (enforced being the operative term) strict building codes as a result. An article in The Guardian puts it well: "Turkey has introduced new building codes, requiring new construction to be earthquake resilient, not least following the 1999 Izmit earthquake in which over 17,000 people died, but these have often been loosely enforced in a country where over half of all buildings were put up illegally."

So yes, it is possible to have a magnitude 7.9 quake on the San Andreas fault (the Hayward fault, being shorter, would have a smaller quake), but the death and destruction would be much less than in Turkey and Syria. And we in Mission Bay should count ourselves fortunate that our homes are properly braced, and unlikely to collapse. We would still lose our utilities, and there would be damage, but not like what happened in Turkey and Syria.

2 月 6 日襲擊土耳其和敘利亞的 7.8 級地震與 1906 年舊金山地震的震級相似。 但這些地震與今天可能發生的地震之間存有一些差異。

根據災區的電視報導顯示，有許多完全倒塌的建築物緊挨著其他看起來相對完好的建築物。 區別在那裡？在於施工方法。許多被毀壞的建築物看起來好像是用未加固的混凝土建造的，有些建築物看起來好像它們用的鋼筋很少。 我們不知道被毀壞或嚴重損壞的建築物是何時建造的，但土耳其並不是沒有經歷過地震：自1900 年以來，該國發生了大約 60 次6.0 級或以上的重大地震——可以肯定有足夠長的時間以建立適當的建築規範。加州同期間所發生的地震次數大致相同，但加州制定並執行(强制执行是操作術語）嚴格的建築規範。《衛報》的一篇文章說得很好：“土耳其引入了新的建築規範，要求新建築具有抗震能力，尤其是在 1999 年伊茲米特(Izmit) 地震造成 17,000 多人死亡之後。可是在一個半數以上的建築都是非法建造的國家，這些措施的執行往往是很鬆散。”

所以是的，聖安德烈亞斯斷層有可能發生 7.9 級地震（海沃德斷層較短，地震級別可能較低），但死亡人數和破壞情度會比土耳其和敘利亞少得多。 我們在 Mission Bay 應該算幸運的，雖然地震時我們仍然可能會失去水電供應，但因為我們的房屋都有適當的支撐，因此不太會像土耳其和敘利亞的房子那樣倒塌。

Rent Pass-Through Appeal Denied

The 16 page Mission Bay Appeal Petition was received. Anyone who still wants to receive a copy, please email mbhoasl@gmail.com and a copy will be emailed to you. Several comments were made by those attending this meeting.

Per the Rent Control Ordinance that was passed in 2019, the repair of the wall falls under the definition of a capital improvement which means the cost of repair per the rent ordinance can be passed along to the tenants. There are several loop holes in the ordinance that were noticed prior to the hearing that took place in Nov., 2022. The City Council has a priority that they will go through the ordinance and close up these loop holes. As we go forward suggestions were to attend the city council meetings, attend the budget workshops that are presently being held, contacting Legal Aid and Centro Legal De La Raza, get the media involved and picket City Hall. It was suggested we contact Palmer who was Barbara Sullivan's legal advisor and participated in the hearing. It would be interesting to hear what her reaction was to the denial and her suggestions as where we go from here.

Questions were raised and conversations took place at this meeting…
Who inspects the wall, when is it inspected, how is it inspected, is an engineer brought in to inspect, is there paperwork to document the inspections?
Shouldn't money be set aside for these repairs? Isn't it a law that a certain percentage of rent money received by the property owner be place in an account for repairs?
Were the estimates based on a sound wall when the wall is basically a perimeter wall? If a perimeter wall would it be less expensive to install a wooden wall such as the wall along Wicks?
It is up to the property owner what kind of insurance they carry. In California it isn't mandatory to carry insurance. What kind of insurance does BSM have?
This may be out of the city's hands and we need to go to an Assembly person. We need to find out more about mobile home California law.

Volunteers are WELCOME!
As you might have noticed, the MBRA has a lot of projects going on in 2023. Besides the projects in progress, we're going to update the Community Directory adding new residents information, removing the information of residents who have left the Park and updating others whose contact information has changed. We'd also like to put together a phone tree for our neighbors who don't look at emails or phone texts. We could use a leader on that part of the project.
We're also going to start the lighting project soon. We're currently researching the best product to offer. We're looking for solar lights so that the lights won't increase your monthly power bill.

The MBRA Board meets at 10:am on the first Saturday of every month. Community Members are encouraged to attend these monthly meetings. For more information, please email us at MBHOASL@Gmail.com, look online at NextDoor.com/Mission Bay or put a note in our mailbox in the clubhouse big room on the side of the office.

WATER AEROBICS STARTS IN APRIL

It is almost that time of year when our pool here at Mission Bay will be heated to 80 degrees and that means it is time to gather for an hour or so of gentle water exercise.

We meet at the Monday-Friday @ 9:30 am for group exercise. You do not need to know how to swim to participate. Bring a towel, a warm cover-up and a sturdy pool noodle.

Each "Tenant" is allowed to bring 2 guests.

Any questions call Adrienne Peters (#535) 510-352-3869

Hope to see you on April 3, 2023.

The History of Easter

from Reader's Digest

The Christian celebration of Jesus' resurrection may be the most familiar Easter tradition, but it's certainly not the oldest. The holiday also has roots in paganism and Judaism.

Pagan Easter Traditions

There is historical evidence of millennia-old spring celebrations centered around the equinox—early versions of May Day festivals. Because they occurred at the beginning of the planting season, many of these early pagan holidays used symbols of fertility, growth, birth, fortune, and light conquering the dark. Many secular Easter traditions are handed down from these ancient rituals, including Easter baskets, flower crowns, and egg hunts.

Even the holiday's name has a pagan connection. Historians believe Easter was named after one of the more popular figures in these celebrations: the Anglo-Saxon goddess Eostre.

Christian Easter Traditions

Easter serves as the foundation for many holy celebrations that lead up it, starting with Ash Wednesday (the first day of Lent), Lent (the observance of giving up something you love for 40 days in honor of Jesus' 40-day fast in the desert), Palm Sunday (the day Jesus rode into Jerusalem and was celebrated as the messiah), and Good Friday (the day Jesus was crucified).

Why Do We Celebrate Easter with Eggs and Bunnies?

Marking such a solemn holiday with a mascot like the Easter Bunny may not seem like the most logical choice. But it begins to make sense when you remember that Eostre is the goddess of fertility, and rabbits mate like, well, rabbits. Baby bunnies are everywhere in the springtime, a sign of fertility and, traditionally speaking, good luck.

Its loot—whether candy-colored dyed eggs or those made from sweet chocolate—is a nod to both pagan and Christian traditions. Eggs represent new life, symbolizing not only the fertility of Eostre but also the rebirth of Christ after death.

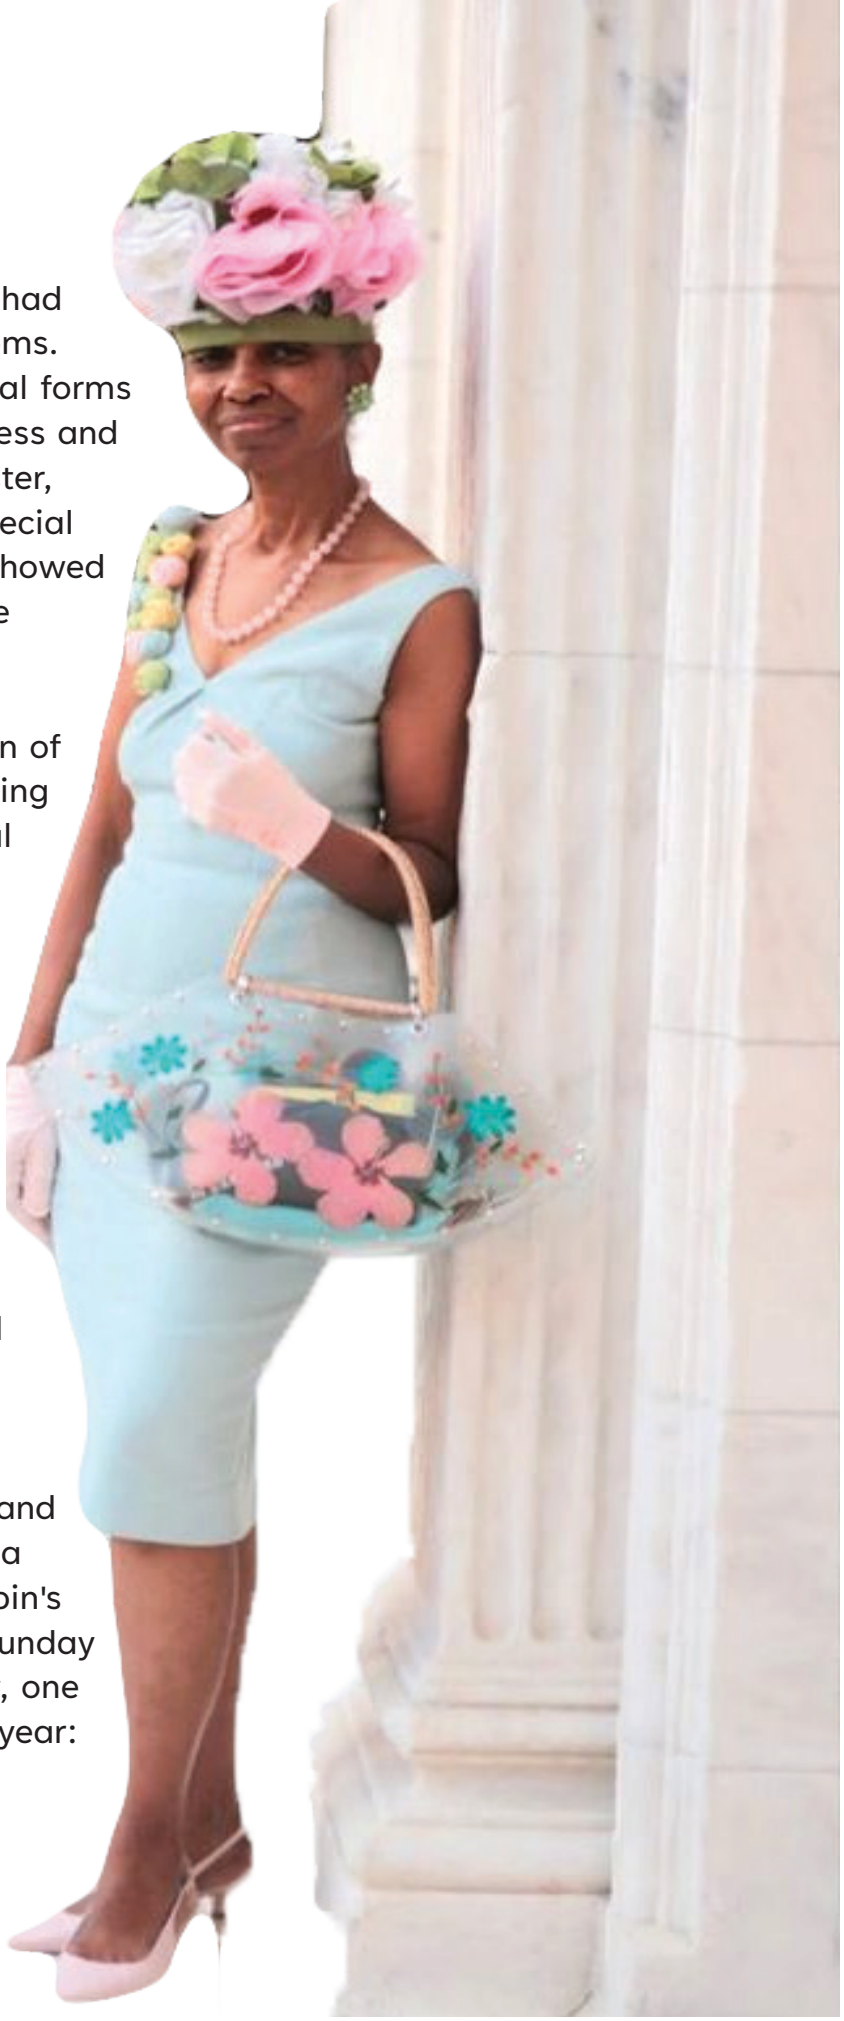

Easter Finery

Having new clothes for Easter had deep roots in European customs. Sacred times called for special forms of dress—material markers of holiness and celebration. Distinctive garb for Easter, like one's "Sunday best" and the special vestments of priests, for centuries showed the solemnity and sacredness of the season.

Authorities attribute the introduction of elaborate Easter ceremonies, including gaudy dress and display of personal finery, to the Roman Emperor Constantine I in the early part of the 4th century, when he "ordered his subjects to dress in their finest and parade in honor of Christ's resurrection".

A superstition current in Tudor times held that unless a person had new homespun cloth available at Easter, moths and crickets would eat the old goods, and destructive rooks would nest in large numbers around the residence. An old Irish adage stated "For Christmas, food and drink; for Easter, new clothes," and a 15th-century proverb from Poor Robin's Almanack states that if on Easter Sunday some part of one's outfit is not new, one will not enjoy good luck during the year:

At Easter let your clothes be new,
Or else be sure you will it rue.

3 Easy Ways Seniors Can Celebrate Earth Day

Earth Hour is a special no-devices hour observed at the end of March each year that was created by the World Wildlife Fund (also known as the World Wide Fund for Nature in some countries). We celebrate Earth Day every year on April 22, and there are ways that you can start celebrating early this year. Here are three ways you can help take care of our earth today and every day.

1. Eliminate Waste

There are several different ways in which you can work toward eliminating a majority of your waste and keep it out of landfills. Start small by separating your garbage into recyclable items and non-recyclable ones. Learn which items can be recycled so you have an easier time sorting your waste. Remember that in addition to the item recycling services provided by your area, you can also recycle your old food waste into compost for your yard. This type of waste is often called “green waste”.

2. Plant a Garden

Gardening is an activity that you can do alone or with a group of friends in your neighborhood or assisted living community. Gardening is not only great for the earth, because the plants we grow help to create food and oxygen for other living things, but it’s great for senior as well. It gets your body lots of sunlight, provides low-impact physical activity, and gives you the opportunity to socialize with others who enjoy the activity, too. Caring for something living, whether a plant or an animal, has been shown to boost mood and increase positive behavior. One study found that seniors who took care of their plants regularly reported improved happiness levels over a four-week time period.

3. Limit Device Use

Every year at the end of March, Earth Hour is observed across the globe. During this special hour, people are encouraged to turn off all electronics and unnecessary lights for one hour. While this particular hour only happens once a year, you can practice your own “earth hour” for one hour a day in your own home every day of the year. Just turn off, unplug, and relax outside with a good book, take a short nap, or maybe do some gardening with your friends.

Your April Home Checklist

April is a wonderful time to freshen up the home inside and out. To get sparkling windows, a clutter-free garage and more, here are tasks to make the most of the first full month of spring.

1. Inspect paths and driveway. Check your driveway and paths for cracks.

2. Clean and inspect screen doors and windows. Pollen and grime can also build up on window screens, so it's a good idea to clean them once a year. For a quick cleaning, leave screens in place and vacuum with a dusting attachment. For a deeper cleaning, remove screens (mark which is which if cleaning multiple windows) and gently scrub with warm, soapy water. Rinse and let dry.

3. Check safety devices. Test batteries on smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, replacing them as needed. It's also a good idea to periodically check for recalls of your home safety products; you can find up-to-date listings at Recalls.gov.

4. Clear clutter. Create more space in your home by clearing out unloved items. If you have a lot to get rid of, set a date to hold a yard sale. Or contact a local charity to schedule a pickup — some will send a truck free of charge if you're donating large items like furniture. If you have a lot of one type of item (for example, books or baby clothes), look for a consignment shop in your town where you may be able to sell them.

5. Spruce up the front porch. Clean the porch floor, exterior windows, windowsills and front door. Wipe cobwebs from the ceiling and high corners. Lay down a fresh doormat, and plant a pot of flowers. If you have porch furniture, clean it off and wash the cushions.

APRIL HEALTH TIPS

April is National Stress Awareness Month, and while stress is unavoidable for the vast majority of Americans, there are many ways to help prevent and manage it. Take a look at these tips for preventing and managing stress in your life.

Practice the Big Three

There is a reason that eating healthy, exercising and getting enough sleep always appear on prevention lists. These three habits are the cornerstone to a happy, healthy life and their impact on stress is no different.

- Eating a diet full of fresh, whole foods helps the body combat stress naturally. It is also wise to avoid stimulants like caffeine, alcohol and nicotine that can amplify stress, interfere with sleep and worsen the effects stress has on the body.

- Getting the recommended amount of exercise lowers blood pressure and provides a healthy outlet to relieve stress. Rhythmic exercise such as walking, jogging and swimming has proven to be especially effective. Aim for 30 minutes of moderate activity, five days a week.

- There is a reason sleep deprivation is a form of torture. Not getting a proper amount of sleep makes it difficult to deal with stressful situations and can increase anxiety and depression. To establish a healthy sleeping routine, make sure to turn off all electronics at least 30 minutes prior to going to bed and try to establish a calming nighttime ritual, such as reading or meditating. This ritual will signal your mind to relax and prepare for a restful night's sleep.

How to Plant a Container Garden in 6 Easy Steps from Better Homes & Garden

Containers are an easy way to add a splash of color to your garden, patio, or porch. The right mix of plants arranged correctly in a pretty planter can be pure magic. These six simple steps will show you how to create a beautiful arrangement every time.

1. Choose the Right Container
Much like plants, containers have their own characteristics to take into account, including weight, sensitivity to weather changes, and appearance. You'll also want to consider your budget, space, and style when choosing a container.

2. Select Color Schemes and Plant Combinations.
Having a color theme for your container garden can help you select a good mix of plants. When combining plants in your containers, make sure they' all need the same light levels and frequency of watering.

3. Limit the Number of Plants You Use
Be careful not to overfill a container garden. If the plants are overcrowded, growth can be stunted both above and below the soil. To lessen the chances of overfilling a container

4. Fill the Container with Potting Mix
Fill your container two-thirds full with an all-purpose potting mix. Don't be tempted to use garden soil. It's too heavy and won't drain as well

Test Garden Tip: Before filling your container, you can place a piece from a broken clay pot over the drainage hole to prevent the potting mix from draining out—but make sure the water can still drain. Never add a layer of rocks to the bottom because this actually makes it harder for water to drain out, rather than helping.

5. Place Plants in Your Container
Avoid tugging on the plant itself, which may damage it. Then, set your plants on the potting mix so that the top of their root balls are a couple of inches below the rim of your container. Fill in around your plants with more potting mix, making sure the stems are no deeper in soil than they were in their nursery containers.

6. After that first watering, check back in a day or two to see if the first inch or so of soil is dry to the touch. If it's dry, it's time to water again. You'll know you've given your container enough water when some runs out of the drainage hole (s). If you choose to use a saucer under the pot, make sure to keep it emptied since plant roots can rot when left sitting in the collected water.
