How to Keep Up With The Latest Earthquakes

by Peter Cleaveland

This is being written on April 18, the 117th anniversary of the Great San Francisco Earthquake of 1906. Over the years we've had plenty of earthquakes, but as the 1906 and the 1989 Loma Prieta quakes show, when it comes to earth movements, size does matter. As you know, California has earthquakes on almost a daily basis, but we don't notice them because they are generally too weak or too far away. Sometimes we do feel one — like the 3.0 one that happened on April 1, with the epicenter just west of Lake Chabot Regional Park — but many of us didn't notice it. There hasn't been one much bigger around here for some time.

But that doesn't mean we should forget preparation, for both earthquakes and other disasters.

This column will appear well after the event, but let us hope that many Mission Bay residents took advantage of the free Personal Emergency Preparedness Presentation by the Alameda County Fire Dept. on April 26. Any time you can get free training, take it!

Speaking of frequent earthquakes, if you want to get your fill of minor temblors, go up to The Geysers, a little less than three hours away from here. The Geysers is the home of the biggest geothermal power plant in the world, and with all that energy percolating just under the surface the place tends to jiggle like a bowl of Jell-O, with about one earthquake every day.

If you'd like a technical explanation of what causes those quakes you can find it on the US Geological Survey at https://www.usgs.gov/faqs/why-are-there-so-many-earthquakes-geysers-area-northern-california.

如何趕上最新的地震信息

本文寫於 4 月 18 日，即 1906 年舊金山大地震 117 週年紀念日。多年來，我們經歷過多次地震，但正如 1906 年和 1989 年 Loma Prieta 地震所表現那樣，當談到地動時，震動强度大小很重要。 如您所知，加州幾乎每天都會發生地震，因為它們通常太弱或太遠所以我們沒有注意到它們。 有時我們確實感覺到了---比如發生在 4 月 1 日的 3.0 级地震，震央就在 Chabot 湖區域公園以西--- 但我們中的許多人都沒有注意到。有一段時間，沒有發生比這次更大的地震了。

這並不意味著我們應該忘記為地震或其他災難做好準備。

雖然本專欄在阿拉米達縣消防局 4 月 26 日演示活動結束後出版，但希望許多 Mission Bay 居民已經充分使用阿拉米達縣消防局 所提供的免費個人應急準備演示。請不要錯過任何可以獲得免費培訓的機會！

說到頻繁的地震，如果你想體驗小地震，那就去距離這裡不到三個小時的路程的 Geysers 間歇噴泉吧。 間歇噴泉是世界上最大的地熱能的發源地，所有的能量都在地表下滲透，這個地方大約每天發生一次地震，往往好像一碗果凍一樣搖晃。

如果您想了解對這些地震起因的技術解釋，可以在美國地質調查局找到，網址為 https://www.usgs.gov/faqs/why-are-there-so-many-earthquakes-geysers-area-northern-california.

- Not enough residents voted to consider the survey data significant. Despite notifying the entire community about the survey through written, verbal, and digital communication, only 61 finished surveys were received.

- Several key concerns were highlighted by residents:
  - General perception is that Park management upholds Park Guidelines inequitably.
  - Uncertainty of how to report a crime and who to report it to is still not clear; example, what does the Office do with the information they received from a resident about a crime?
  - Lack of effective action or follow-up from management: example, are other neighbors notified that a crime has happened close to them?
  - Lack of effective communication from BSM park and regional management about matters important to the health and safety of our residents, example: flood damage control provided by management.

- We are developing a new survey that will focus on these concerns. The new survey will also provide residents the opportunity to give kudos to park management where earned.

- More information on the new survey will be announced shortly.

- If you want change or if you want to show appreciation of how issues are handled in the Park, then make your opinion count – complete the next survey!

A New Feature "Meet your Neighbor!" Diana Gregory is a native Californian. She has one son who lives in Benicia. A few years ago, she retired from her career as an Orthopedic Nurse and moved into Mission Bay Park. She volunteers in the St. Leander Parish office. Diana also enjoys keeping active, travelling and reading. Thank you, Diana, for letting us get to know you better! There will be more profiles in the future.

The MBRA Board meets at 10am on the first Saturday of every month. Please attend these monthly meetings. Zoom meetings are also provided. Meaningful Ways to Celebrate Father's Day

By Alison Ensign

Father’s Day is that one special day every year to celebrate the fathers in your life. It can look different for everyone, whether you’re celebrating your father,

1. Learn about his family tree.
Tracing your father’s family tree can help you learn more about his family’s past and cultural heritage. It can be a meaningful way to feel more connected to your family, past and present.

2. Do a puzzle together.
Combine a gift with an activity, and get a new puzzle as a gift for Father’s Day. To make it extra special, order a custom puzzle made with family photos.

3. Explore ancestral locations.
If you’re connected to the FamilySearch Family Tree, Map My Ancestors allows you to find sites that are significant to your father’s family. It could help you find birth and burial sites, hometowns, and more places to visit.

4. Bake a Father’s Day treat or dinner.
Making something delicious that you can enjoy as a family is a wonderful way to show your love for someone. For an extra special treat, try new recipes from around the world, particularly if you can find recipes that reflect your cultural heritage.

5. Participate in his favorite hobby.
If your dad loves cooking, working with his hands, or gardening, dedicate time during the day to doing it with him. He’ll enjoy doing what he loves, and he’ll love it even more because you’re doing it with him.

June Checklist

Summer officially begins June 21, but why wait until then to get into the summer spirit? Get a jump-start by prepping your home and garden for warm weather, setting up the perfect drip-dry spot for beach towels, reorganizing the kitchen (hello, smoothie bar) and more. These to-dos cover all the bases, so you can enjoy the season to the fullest.

1. Reorganize your kitchen. The change in seasons is a good time to rethink how you have things arranged in the kitchen. If there are small appliances you use more in the warmer months (a blender for smoothies, perhaps, or an ice cream maker), move them to a more accessible spot, and you will be more likely to use them.

2. Keep cooling systems running smoothly. Take the time before hot weather sets in to dust ceiling fans, or have standing fans on the ready when the heat turns up.

3. Lighten up decor. Roll up heavy rugs, put crisp percale or cooling linen sheets on the beds and bring in accents in lighter hues for the warmer months ahead. Breezy white curtains look delightfully cool in summer, but if the weather gets quite hot where you live, you may want to leave heavy window coverings in place. Closing the shades during the heat of the day can actually help keep your house cooler.

4. Give your shed a clean-out. Since you'll likely be spending more time in your outdoor spaces during the summer, it's a good idea to take some time at the start of the season to clear out space in your storage area. Take old paint cans to a hazardous waste drop-off point, sell or give away items you no longer want and organize what's left into zones of use: garden tools and supplies, outdoor adventures and sports gear, and household tools.

5. Catch up on projects and maintenance. No one is perfect, and chances are there are a few home-maintenance projects you've been meaning tackle. Why not make June the month to get caught up?

HEALTH TIPS

1 Minute: Grab a tomato! Tomatoes contain lycopene, a powerful cancer fighter, and are rich in vitamin C, and retain their nutritional value even when cooked. Add them to your salads, pastas or sandwiches to reap their benefits.

5 Minute: Turn the heat down when you shower or bathe. Keep the water warm enough for comfort, but not too hot, or it will dry out your skin and cause premature aging.

15 Minute: Don't skip breakfast! Load up on a balanced meal and start the day off with the right energy to keep you focused, happy, and healthy! Make sure it's packed with whole grains, fiber, protein, and calcium. Keep an eye on the sugar content of cereals and juices to make sure you don't crash before your next meal.

30 Minute: When you exercise, start with weight training. Studies show that starting with a high intensity work will allow you to see better results, because you're fresh and have the energy you need to push yourself. Conversely, you should end with your cardio, because the increased blood flow to the muscles will help your body recover.

TURNING 65 - A RETIREMENT CHECKLIST by Brian Colvert

Are your turning 65 soon? Turning 65 is a major milestone and pivotal age for your retirement planning. Not only is this an important age for government programs like Medicare and Social Security, but it's also a perfect time to check other parts of your financial plan, particularly if you're about to retire. Here are 6 important things to do as you get closer to your 65th birthday to make sure this year and the many years that follow are amazing!

1. Prepare for Medicare
Medicare is the most common form of health care coverage for older Americans. The program has been in existence since 1965 and provides a way for seniors to have their health needs taken care of after they retire from the workforce.

2. Consider Long Term Care Insurance
Another prudent thing to do when you are turning 65 is to consider your long-term care insurance options before retirement.

3. Review your Social Security Benefits
If you haven't yet started to collect Social Security, your 65th birthday is a great time to review your social security strategy to help you maximize your benefits.

4. Review Retirement Accounts
Even if you are not planning to retire soon, now (and every quarter for that matter) is a good time to check in on your retirement accounts. Is your portfolio allocated in a way that lines up with your target retirement date? When is the last time you met with your financial advisor? Do you need to catch up a little? Do you have a plan for your Required Minimum Distributions?

5. Update Estate Planning Documents
The next item on the retirement checklist of important things to do when Turning 65 is to get your estate planning documents and legal ducks in a row. If you do not yet have an estate plan, will, medical directive, or financial power of attorney, it is time to get those in order. It is not too late! If you do have them, take some time to update them.

6. Get Tax Breaks
Finally, don't let medicare be the only gift to you when you turn 65. Starting in the year you turn 65, you qualify for a larger standard deduction when you file your federal income tax return. You may also qualify for extra state or local tax breaks at age 65.

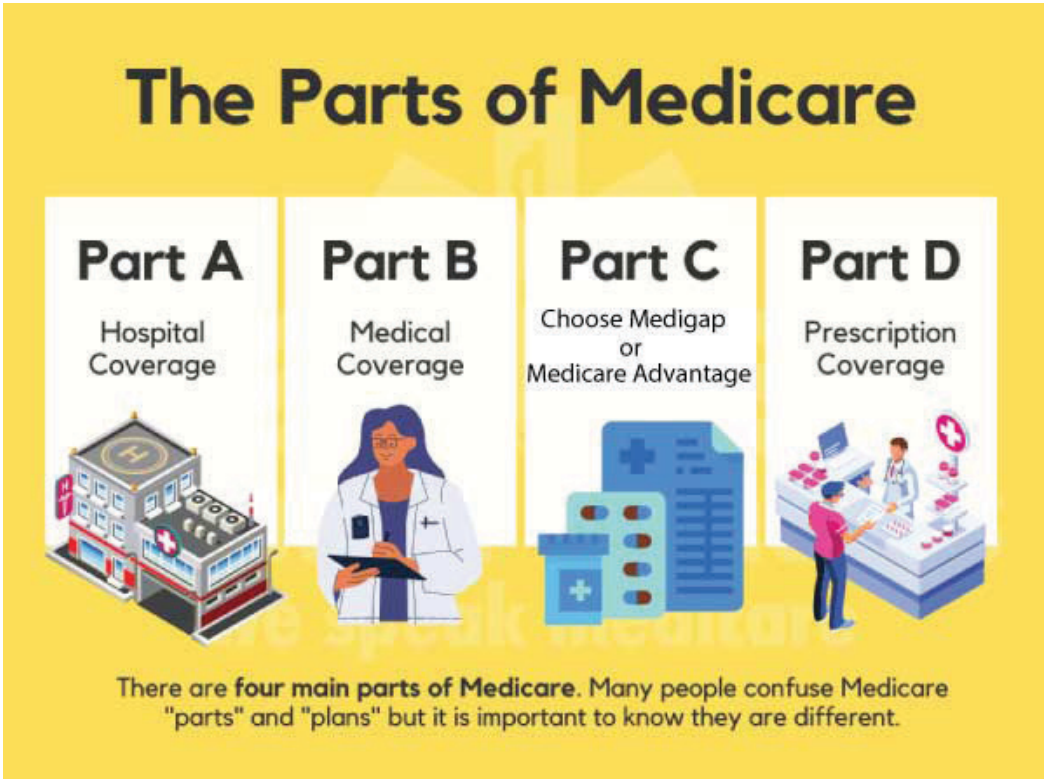

Many states also offer senior property tax exemptions as well. For example, in Colorado for those who qualify, 50 percent of the first $200,000 of the actual value of the applicant's primary residence is exempted. Check with your local tax assessor to see what property tax breaks may be available to you.

Bonus – Turning 65 Birthday Advice

Relax and enjoy it. As much as turning 65 is a time to plan for retirement, it is also a time to celebrate.

If you plan to indulge in a much-deserved tropical getaway or a quick trip to visit your grandchildren, you may be able to take advantage of new travel discounts. Delta, American, and United Airlines all offer senior discounts on selected flights. Additionally, many hotels, car rental companies, and cruise lines all also offer senior discounts. So treat yourself!

MEDICARE NEWS

What is Medicare?
Medicare is basically the federal government's health insurance program for people 65 or older (or younger with disabilities). Medicare is primarily funded by payroll taxes paid by most employees, employers, and people who are self-employed. Funds are paid through the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund held by the U.S. Treasury.

When can I enroll in Medicare?
Starting 3 months before the month you turn 65, you are eligible to enroll in Medicare, you can also sign up during your birthday month and the three months following your 65th birthday. Essentially, you have a seven-month window to sign up for Medicare. Be mindful of your timing and enrollment because Medicare charges several late-enrollment penalties.

What does Medicare cover?
Medicare benefits vary depending on the enrollment plan you choose. Medicare is made up of four enrollment plans: Medicare Part A, Part B, Part C, and Part D.

Here is a quick breakdown of the four parts of Medicare:

Medicare Part A: Know as the Original Medicare, Part A covers inpatient hospital care, home health, nursing, and hospice care. Part A is typically paired with Medicare Part B.

Medicare Part B: Still considered part of the Original Medicare, Part B helps cover doctor's visits, lab work, diagnostic and preventative care, and mental health. It does not include dental and vision benefits.

Medicare Part C: This option offers traditional Medicare coverage but includes more coverage for routine healthcare that you use every day, routine dental care, vision care, and hearing. Plus, it covers wellness programs and fitness memberships. Medicare Part C is also known as Medicare Advantage and is a form of private insurance. Note that you will not be automatically enrolled in these benefits.

Medicare Part D: Medicare Part D is a stand-alone plan provided through private insurers that covers the costs of prescription drugs. Most people will need Medicare Part D prescription drug coverage. Even if you're fortunate enough to be in good health now, you may need significant prescription drugs in the future.

June Gardening

Gardening to support our California native bees

Since native bee species differ in the season when they emerge from overwintering, bee gardens should contain plants with attractive flowers at different times of the year. The Urban California Native Bee Survey demonstrated that ". . . with the right bee plants, one small urban garden can attract forty to fifty species of native bees".

The plants included here were selected based on information available through this work and that of others both in the Bay Area and the Sacramento Valley. These plants were chosen for spring, summer and fall bloom, low to medium-low watering need, low maintenance requirements and the variety of bee species they attract.

Frikart's aster, Aster × frikartii 'Mönch' is a herbaceous perennial that flowers throughout summer. Its lavender-blue daisies pair well with silver foliage plants. An absolute butterfly magnet it also attracts many types of native bees, and provides them with both pollen and nectar. Deadheading spent flowers will extend its flowering season.

California poppy, Eschscholzia californica is technically an annual, but they will "perennial-ize" by sprouting the following year from their roots and lower stems or by re-seeding. Look for sweat bees scrambling around the bottom of the flower and covering themselves with pollen.

Blanket flower, Gaillardia × grandiflora is a colorful daisy-type flower popular with a number of native bees. In the Valley they attract long-horned bees like Melissodes which can be easily observed collecting nectar and pollen from the showy orange and yellow flowers. This plant may be short-lived in heavy soils.

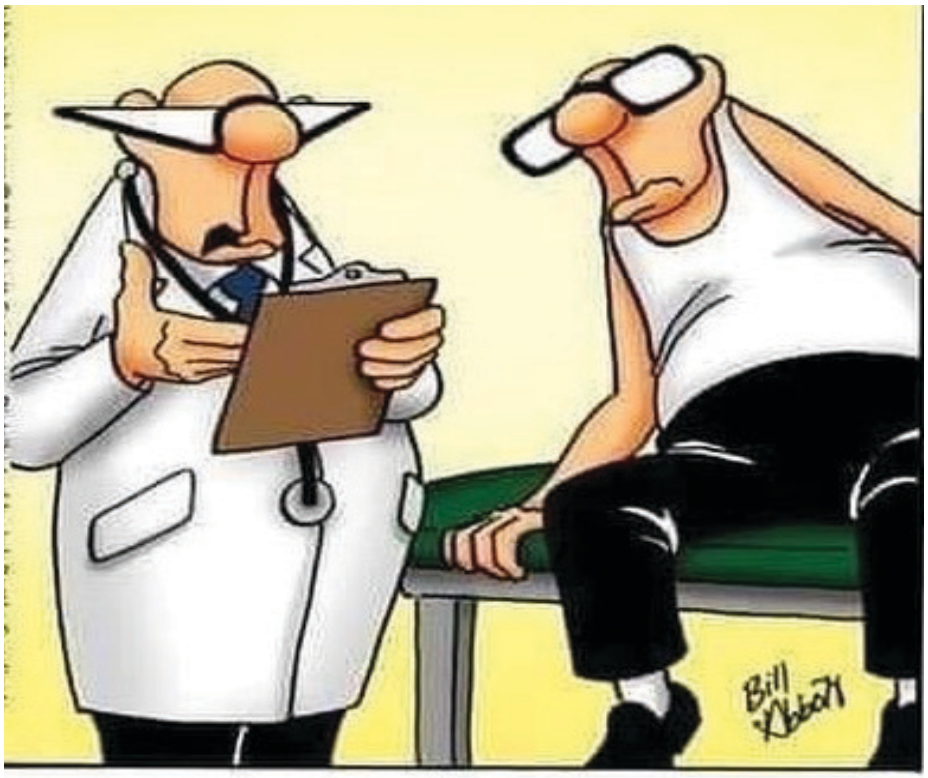

Goodwin Creek lavender, Lavandula × ginginsii 'Goodwin Creek Grey' hybrid lavender is a tough and long-blooming sub-shrub that can be used to provide winter structure to your pollinator planting. Blooming early and lasting into summer, it is popular with large carpenter bees and a range of other smaller bees for its nectar. It can be pruned to shape, to increase branching, or to keep a compact form.
Germander sage, Salvia chamaedryoides blooms with beautiful dark blue flowers from late spring to early summer and again in fall. It is a primary nectar source for a number of bee types. Male carder bees may be most noticeable as they set up territories around flowering patches and knock into other bees that enter their area. Deadheading spent flowers in early summer will help the blossoms (and the bees) return in fall.

Cascade Creek goldenrod, Solidago californica 'Cascade Creek' blooms summer into fall. Its flame-shaped yellow spikes of flower clusters are attractive to small bees and butterflies. Tough and drought tolerant, it is perfect in a native garden with other low-water plants. Cut flower spikes to the ground after bloom to encourage reblooming. This plant will overwinter as a small mat of green leaves.

Ray Hartman's California lilac, Ceanothus 'Ray Hartman', California lilacs are a large group of native shrubs that are an excellent source of pollen for early spring bees. 'Ray Hartman' is an upright large shrub that can be trained as a small tree and is covered with clear blue flowers in March. Unlike some other California lilacs, it tolerates summer irrigation and is relatively long-lived.
