Some Lessons from the Talk on Personal Emergency Preparedness

by Peter Cleaveland

On April 26 representatives of the Alameda County Fire Dept., along with Ryan Jasinsky of Brandenburg Staedler & Moore, gave a presentation in the Clubhouse on Personal Emergency Preparedness. Much of what was said echoes what we've been suggesting all along, but there were some other interesting points as well:

When an disaster hits we should not have to worry about gas leaking or water flooding, as Mission Bay management will immediately shut off all utilities — gas, water and electricity. Difficulties in turning the gas on again later may be the price we pay (lighting pilot lights, for example) but it sure beats having an explosion. Keep a pair of shoes with hard soles under your bed. After an earthquake there will be broken glass on the floor.

Every resident should have a written evacuation plan for each member of the household, as well as an agreed-upon location to gather if they have to leave the house. Every household should also have an emergency contact, preferably several hours away and not in the same disaster area.

After a disaster telephone service will be spotty at best. If you have cordless phones connected to a landline you should also have a regular wired phone somewhere, because with power out the cordless base station will be dead. If you can't get through with a cellphone, try sending texts, which puts less burden on the system.

We will be rewriting parts of the VIEU Earthquake Brochure in consultation with Ryan Jasinsky. It should be out sometime this year.

從「個人應急準備」演講得到的一些啟示

4 月 26 日，阿拉米達縣消防局的代表與 Brandenburg Staedler & Moore 的 Ryan Jasinsky 一起在俱樂部會所發表了關於個人應急準備的演講。 所說的大部分內容與我們一直以來的建議互相呼應，但也有一些其他有意思的觀點：

當災難襲來時，我們不必擔心煤氣洩漏或水淹，因為 Mission Bay 管理層會立即關閉所有公用設施——如煤氣、水和電。事後我們可能要付出啟動煤氣的代價(例如，點燃煤氣熱水器上指示燈)，但它肯定比煤氣洩漏發生爆炸要好。

在床下放一雙硬底鞋。 地震過後，地板上可能會有碎玻璃。

每個居民都應該為每個家庭成員制定一份書面疏散計劃，以及如果他們必須離開房屋時商定的集合地點。 每家每戶也應該有一個緊急聯繫人，最好那個人居住距離幾個小時路程，不要在同一個災區。

災難過後，電話服務會變得參差不齊。如果您有連接座機的無線電話，您也應該在家裡某處有一部普通的有線電話，因為一旦斷電，無線電話就會失效。

This is How Americans Celebrate the 4th of July

By Sara Burkhard

The 4th of July, or Independence Day, is arguably America's favorite holiday! The day commemorates when the US gained its independence, so historically, the day is filled with celebrations. One of the most colorful and interesting celebrations of the year, it's a time to get together with friends, enjoy your favorite summer foods, listen to music, and have a great time

The history

Independence Day commemorates the day in 1776 that the Declaration of Independence was announced. At the time, the United States existed as thirteen colonies that belonged to Great Britain. The two had been at war for more than a year, but relations had been deteriorating for more than a decade at that point. The colonies wanted to govern themselves and it had been an ongoing problem for both parties.

In July 1776, the Declaration of Independence was put in place, declaring that the colonies in the US would become independent states and no longer operate under British rule. Congress voted to declare independence on July 2nd and it was announced two days later on July 4th. This lead to the celebrations we still enjoy today.

Red, white, and blue

While the day itself is incredibly casual, there's an important dress code almost everyone goes by. You're practically required to wear red, white, and blue! And while these friendly colors blend well with each other, they're also our national colors and represent important values. The red is for hardiness and valor. The white represents purity and innocence. The blue is for vigilance, perseverance, and justice.

Friends and loved ones

Another important holiday tradition is spending time with people you care about. Whether you live near family or friends, this is a great day to spend time with someone. In some parts of the country, families will use this as a time to rent a summer house by the ocean and enjoy a vacation together. Others will get together with roommates and friends and explore events around the city. However you decide to spend the day, it's best with someone by your side.

Fireworks

No Independence Day is complete without a huge fireworks display. Whether in a smaller town or a big metro area, just about every county hosts a fireworks show. One of the favorite celebrations on the west coast is AmeriFest at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena or Hollywood Bowl's "Fireworks Spectacular". On the east coast, there's a huge show in Philadelphia above the Philadelphia Museum of Art on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway. But the largest in the country is the Macy's Fourth of July Fireworks display in New York. Fireworks are launched from boats on the East River and are best enjoyed from a rooftop around Manhattan.

July Gardening

Ways to Conserve Water in the Garden By Emily Hannemann

Improve the Soil and Use Compost to Conserve Water

Use organic matter, such as compost, chopped-up leaves or composted manure, to supplement your soil. These organic materials increase the water-holding capacity of soil. A good rule of thumb is to add 1 inch of compost per year.

In the planting hole, mix 1 part compost to 1 part soil. The compost will help the soil hold onto water for a longer length of time while not allowing it to become waterlogged. Compost also adds nutrients to the soil.

Water Plants Deeply in the Early Morning

Give your plants a solid soak. While sprinklers get the job done, a soaker hose is even better. It applies the water directly to the soil by the roots, so up to 90 percent is actually available to plants.

By watering in the cooler period of morning, there is less evaporation occurring. Avoid watering in the afternoon, when much of the water can be lost to evaporation. It is also wise to avoid watering in the evening when the moisture can foster fungal diseases.

Just Add Mulch

Spread mulch. It prevents weeds from growing and soaking up all of the water you add to the planting area. A layer of mulch provides the most bang for your buck. Organic mulches are best. Grass clippings free of weedkillers, evergreen needles, shredded bark and fall leaves will adds nutrients to the soil over time.

Once you water plants, moisture begins to immediately evaporate from the soil's surface. By adding a layer of mulch, you help conserve water by limiting the amount lost to the atmosphere. In addition, mulching helps to keep the soil moist longer while keeping soil temperature cooler in summer and warmer in winter.

Group Plants with Similar Watering Requirements Together

Know the characteristics of your planting site, such as the amount of sun and shade it receives, soil type and wind conditions. Make a plan to group plants with similar needs, like these drought-tolerant plants.

Another drought tolerant garden tip: place higher water use plants toward the house where they can be watered easily. Group more drought tolerant plants on the the outer edges of the landscape.

Remove the Competition

Keep up with garden chores. Healthy plants mean less work! When you stay on top of tasks such as weeding, thinning and pruning, you add to the health of your plants and, in turn, need to water less frequently.

Decrease the Amount of Grass in Your Landscape

A lawn uses a large amount of water—an average of 55 inches a year. Beds filled with perennials will use much less water and provide a welcome spot of color in the landscape. If you opt to take out part of, or even your entire lawn, there are countless ways to create a beautiful garden that needs little to no supplemental water.
