All Quiet on the Earthquake Front

by Peter Cleaveland

The past month (through the third week in June) has been remarkably quiet, seismically, with no significant earthquakes in the U.S., a 6.4-magnitude temblor in Mexico's Baja California on June 18, and a 7.2 south if the Fiji Islands on June 15.

Of course there's no telling what might have happened between the time this is written and when you read it, but that's where we are today.

Why is the San Andreas so quiet?

A June 7 article in the San Francisco Chronicle reports on an item from the journal Nature about the southern portion of the San Andreas fault system. What is interesting is that the fault, longest in California, has been, as the old movie cliché says, "quiet — too quiet." In the movies that line is usually followed quickly by some big event, but so far it hasn't on the San Andreas. The Nature article suggests that past major quakes have happened when the water level in Lake Cahuilla in the Central Valley has been highest (and thus at its greatest weight). Lake Cahuilla has grown and shrunk over the millennia; what remains of it these days is the Salton Sea in Riverside County, which has been shrinking for years. Now, says The Chronicle, there are efforts to add more water to keep it from drying up completely. Whether that will trigger an earthquake is anybody's guess; all we can say for sure is that someday the fault will rupture.

The ShakeOut is coming

The annual Great California Shakeout will be October 19th this year, beginning at 10:19 a.m. Block Captains should make sure their flashlight and two-way radio batteries are fresh. It would also be good to go over how to set the radio to the proper channel: main channel 5, sub channel also 5. Practice setting it, checking the instructions in your Block Captain kit if necessary. If you still have difficulty, give Pete Cleaveland a call at 510-351-1742.

園區內志願者應急組織 (VIEU) 信息

地震前一片平靜

過去一個月（到 6 月的第三週為止）在地震方面非常平靜。除了在 6 月 18 日墨西哥的下加利福尼亞州發生 6.4 級地震以及6月15 日斐濟群島發生 7.2 級地震之外，美國本土沒有發生大地震。

當然，我們無法得知從撰寫本文到您閱讀本文之間會發生什麼情況，但這就是我們目前的情況。

為什麼 San Andreas 斷層如此安靜？

《舊金山紀事報》6 月 7 日的一篇文章報導了《自然》雜誌的一篇關於San Andreas斷層系统南端的文章。 有趣的是，正如老電影的老生常談所說，加州最長的斷層是"安靜—太安靜了"。在電影中，當引用這短語時通常表示很快就會發生一些重大事件。到目前為止，它還沒有出現在San Andreas 斷層上。《自然》雜誌的文章提出過去的大地震發生在中央山谷的 Lake Cahuilla 湖水位最高(因此重量最大) 的時候。 幾千年來，Lake Cahuilla 湖不斷擴大和縮小。 現在剩下的僅是 Riverside 縣的 Salton Sea, 但多年來它一直繼續在縮小。據《舊金山紀事報》說，現在人們正在努力增加更多的水量以防止它完全乾涸。這是否會引發地震是尚無定論； 我們只能肯定地說，斷層總有一天會斷裂。

ShakeOut 即將到來

一年一度的 Great California Shakeout (全加州大震動）地震演習將於今年 10 月 19 日上午 10:19 開始。街道隊長 應該確保他們的手電筒和雙向無線電電池是新的。 最好事前練習一下如何將收音機設置到正確的頻道：主頻道 5，子頻道也是 5。必要時查閱街道隊長工具包中的說明。 如果您仍有困難，請致電 Pete Cleaveland 510-351-1742 。

About National Dog Day

National Dog Day is celebrated August 26th annually and was founded in 2004 by Pet & Family Lifestyle Expert, Animal Rescue Advocate, Conservationist, Dog Trainer and Author, Colleen Paige, also the founder of many other holidays such as National Puppy Day, National Mutt Day, National Cat Day, National Wildlife Day and many more philanthropic days to bring attention to the plight of animals around the globe and encourage adoption.

National Dog Day celebrates all dogs, mixed breed and pure. Our mission is to help galvanize the public to recognize the number of dogs that need to be rescued each year and acknowledges family dogs and dogs that work selflessly each day to save lives, keep us safe and bring comfort. Dogs put their lives on the line every day...for personal protection, for law enforcement, for the disabled, for our freedom and safety by detecting bombs and drugs and pulling victims of tragedy from wreckage, now they're detecting cancer and seizures...things even humans cannot do.

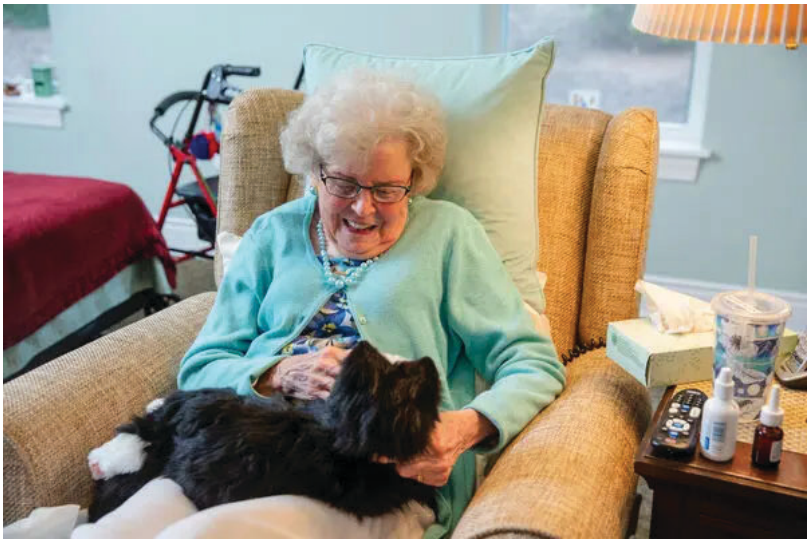

NDD was adopted into New York State Legislation in 2013. While we feel that Americans have the constitutional right to purchase a pure breed dog, we strongly discourage buying dogs from pet stores supplied by puppy mills, backyard breeders, the internet and newspaper ads. Rather, we encourage those seeking new canine companions, to consider choosing adoption first. If you'd like a pure breed dog, look into a pure breed rescue in your city, to see if they might have some little furry soul just waiting to make your life complete. Another great place to find a new best friend is at large chain pet stores that host adoption drives for local shelters and rescues. When considering buying from a breeder, verify that you're buying from a reputable breeder by checking out their licensing, internet reviews and ask for local references such as from a veterinarian. It's vital to educate yourself about the breed you're considering parenting.

"Millions of dogs are killed each year because they're simply unwanted, says Colleen Paige, founder of National Dog Day. They're unwanted because no one realized how to properly care for the demands of the breed. They're unwanted because they were bought as a Christmas gift for a child that didn't keep their promises about caring for the dog... unwanted because they shed too much...unwanted because they bark too much. UNWANTED...simply because someone changed their mind. All a dog wants to do is love you and be loved by you. Dogs are amazing, courageous, sensitive and sentient beings that deserve compassion and respect. Please consider bringing what was once considered "unwanted love", into your heart and home on National Dog Day!"

For dogs adopted on August 26th, National Dog Day becomes many a dog's birthday and for all dogs, it's as popular and exciting as the Super Bowl, with the anticipation of the day culminating into an explosion of network news stories, national TV show segments, online videos, shelter events, internet photos and K9 parties planned around the globe! Even citizens who are not dog owners will be encouraged to donate $5 to their local shelter or rescue on August 26th.

Long-term pet ownership may help older adults retain cognitive skills - University of Florida News

Researchers found that adults ages 50 or older who had owned any kind of pet for more than five years showed slower decline in verbal memory compared to non-pet owners. Photo credit: Shutterstock

Our furry, feathered, finned, scaled and shelled animal friends may do more than bring us emotional comfort.

Owning a pet for over five years may help keep cognitive skills sharp as you age, according to a new study by researchers at the University of Florida, University of Michigan and Virginia Commonwealth University.

The researchers found that adults ages 50 or older who had owned any kind of pet for more than five years showed slower decline in verbal memory — being able to recall words, for example — over time compared to non-pet owners.

"We can't show that this is causal but it does show that pets could buffer or have a protective effect on older adults' cognition and we think it has to do with some of the mechanism related to stress buffering," said Jennifer Applebaum, a doctoral candidate in sociology and National Institutes of Health predoctoral Fellow at the University of Florid. Applebaum is the lead author of the study.

Applebaum said the researchers are not recommending pet ownership as a therapeutic intervention. However, "an unwanted separation from a pet can be devastating for an owner and marginalized populations are most at-risk of these unwanted outcomes," she said. "We do recommend that people who own pets be supported in keeping them via public policy and community partnerships."

Among policies that could be considered: reducing or eliminating pet fees in rental housing, foster or boarding support during times of health crisis or other emergencies and free or low-cost veterinary care for low-income owners.

This is the first study to examine the impact of pet ownership over time on cognitive function among a national sample of U.S. adults ages 50 or older. The 1,300 people studied are participants in the Health and Retirement Study, a longitudinal survey that is tracking 20,000 adults in the U.S. to learn about aging-related issues.

The average age of those included was 65; 53% owned pets, with nearly one-third owning pets for more than five years. While all types of pets were included in the study, dogs were the most prevalent, Applebaum said, followed by cats.

Over six years, cognitive scores declined slower in pet owners and was strongest in long-term pet owners. The effect was most pronounced for White and Black adults, men, adults with advanced degrees and people with incomes of less than $125,000. More research is needed to fully explain the findings, Applebaum said.

There are many studies of mental and physical health benefits of pet ownership, though results have been inconclusive. However, a positive relationship with a pet is thought to buffer stress via emotional support, which also may promote healthy cognitive aging. Taking care of a pet – walking a dog, feeding a cat – also boost physical activity, which is linked to cognitive health.

“These findings provide early evidence to suggest that long-term pet ownership could be protective against cognitive decline, providing a novel and fundamental step to examine how sustained relationships with companion animals contribute to brain health,” according to the authors.

Applebaum said it is possible that people who owned a pet for less than five years also experienced other significant stressors or did not have positive experiences with their pets and so did not reap health benefits from those interactions.

The research team will present the preliminary study, which is currently under review for publication, at the American Academy of Neurology 74th Annual Meeting in April.

Applebaum became interested in issues related to pet ownership and social inequality while working in animal shelters. She completed a master’s in veterinary medicine before pursuing her doctorate.

August Gardening

Potting Soil Recipes

Cook up your own container mix that is suited to your plants

Just as creating a healthy soil environment is crucial for your in-ground plants, providing a suitable growing medium for your container plants is a key factor to success. Most gardeners do fine with bagged container mixes available at the nursery, but these one-size-fits-all options might not be the best options, especially if you are growing plants with specific soil needs.

Making your own container soil might sound like a lot of unnecessary work, but it can improve your plants' performance. And because these mixes have the optimal amount of nutrients and proper drainage, they reduce the amount of time you spend feeding and caring for your containers.

Basic Blend

Simple ingredients make this adaptable mix easy and affordable for everyone

Moisten the ingredients to make mixing easier. Place a ½-inch mesh screen over a garden cart or other large container, and sift all ingredients to remove any large particles. Mix thoroughly.

The handfuls of garden lime, soybean meal, rock phosphate, and kelp meal (any of which can be omitted) provide extra nutrients that enable this mix to feed plants for a year or two without additional fertilization.

Recipe
1 part peat moss
1 part perlite
1 part compost
1 part good garden soil
Optional ingredients

A handful each of:
Garden lime
Soybean meal
Rock phosphate
Kelp meal

—Lee Reich, soil scientist, New Paltz, New York

Annuals

High in nutrients, this mix pumps out the flowers without extra feeding

Because the worm castings and chicken manure provide enough nutrients to last throughout the season and the pine bark continues to increase fertility as it decomposes, this mix requires little or no extra feeding on your part.

Recipe
1 part expanded slate
1 part composted chicken manure
1 part worm castings
1 part composted pine bark
1 part coarse river sand

—Bobbie Saul, Saul Nurseries, Atlanta, Georgia

Tropicals

The best blend has high fertility and the right pH

Though tropicals are a diverse group of plants, they generally prefer a loose, acidic, well-drained, fertile soil high in organic matter. Common tropical plants, like cannas and bananas, will grow in any good soil, but this mix will help them attain optimal growth.

Recipe
Mix together:
2 parts composted bark
2 parts pure pine bark
1 part rice hulls
Handful of charcoal pellets

Combine:
3 parts above mixture
1 part peat moss
1 part perlite

part calcined clay

—Glenn Stokes, Stokes Tropicals, Jeanerette, Louisiana

Cacti and Succulents

Perfect drainage makes this recipe succeed

Top-dress the container soil with small river rock, gravel, aquarium stone, or a fine-grade roofing gravel to keep the crowns of the plants from rotting.

To increase acidity just slightly—something all succulents like—add 1 tablespoon white vinegar to 5 gallons water when watering.

Recipe
5 parts perlite
4 parts bagged potting soil
1 part coarse sand
Pinch of rock dust

—Jeff Moore, Solana Succulents, Solana Beach, California

Woody Plants and Perennials

This long-lasting mixture is the perfect medium for long-term plants

If the mix clumps together and the compost you use is heavy, add more perlite to ensure good drainage. Use extra compost or bark when growing more mature plants, but don't make it too rich for young plants—it could damage their delicate roots and stems.

Recipe
1 part peat moss
1 part composted bark
1 part compost
1 part sand
1 part perlite

—Rita Randolph, Randolph's Greenhouses, Jackson, Tennessee
