JANUARY ASTROLOGICAL SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC

CAPRICORN
Dec 21 - Jan 19

Capricorn is symbolized by the sea goat, a mythological creature with the body of a goat and tail of a fish. This imagery speaks to Capricorn's bifurcated abilities: Capricorns are skilled at navigating both the material and emotional realms. They scale the steepest mountains — Capricorn rules the knees, making it easier for this sign to climb — while simultaneously building up their psychic fortitude. Capricorns are relentless: They are determined to overcome whatever stands in their way. They have big picture, long-term goals and they absolutely don't want to be bogged-down by annoying details or superfluous information. However, because of their unwavering focus, Capricorns can sometimes be perceived as cold, unemotional, or even cutthroat — but that's only because Capricorn has perspective. If it won't matter in five years, Capricorn simply cannot be bothered with it today.

AQUARIUS
Jan 20 - Feb 18

Air energy is all about the mind. Intellectual, curious, and deeply social, the air signs (Gemini, Libra, and Aquarius) are passionate about interpersonal dynamics. As the last air sign in the zodiac, however, Aquarius takes these concepts to a whole other level. Aquarius is represented by the water bearer (hence the "aqua"), the mystical healer who bestows water, or life, upon the land. Represented by the Star card in tarot, Aquarius can be visualized as a larger-than-life, mythical being with one foot firmly planted on the soil (representing a sense of being grounded) and one positioned in the water. Aquarius is holding a vase, which pours new streams of inspiration to cultivate longevity, healing, and hope. Here, it's important to remember that Aquarius is removed from this process — from this vantage, we can see that Aquarius is positioned as an independent entity separate from the life-giving hydration it offers the cracked soil. In this respect, Aquarius exposes its deep connection to community: Rooted in teamwork, collaboration, and the concept of the "greater good," Aquarius is determined to make a powerful difference in the world.

Men & Women's Club

In Mission Bay, a group of individuals have become the driving force behind the fun, dancing, good food, good times and live music in our community.

Leading the charge are CFO's, Chief of Fun Officers, Richard Arroyo and Pam Wright, known for their unwavering commitment to organizing social events and activities. From potlucks, to ice cream socials, Thanksgiving dinners and everything in between, they always ensure there's always something on the calendar to bring neighbors together.

Thank you, Men & Women's Club for creating an environment where every senior resident feels valued and connected. Your efforts have not only enhanced the physical and social aspects of the community but have also encouraged people to be engaged, creating a sense of belonging among our neighbors. The golden years are still a fun and vibrant time thanks to your dedication, hard work and creativity.

Lots of Information Online

Lots of Information Online
There is a great deal of information available online on earthquakes and how to prepare for them (as well as other disasters). Here's a short list of what we have found.

From AARP: aarp.org/disasterprep

The San Francisco Chronicle has a downloadable survival guide at https://www.sfchronicle.com/survival-guide/. Also from the Chronicle is a California Earthquake Map, at https://www.sfchronicle.com/projects/earthquakes/ and an Air Quality Map at https://www.sfchronicle.com/projects/california-air-quality-map/ . A hyper-local air quality map can be found at https://map.purpleair.com/1/mAQI/a10/p604800/cC0#12.78/37.71557/-122.16922. And an air quality reading and forecast for all of San Leandro can be found at https://www.airnow.gov/?city=San%20Leandro&state=CA&country=USA

The California Seismic Safety Commission (https://ssc.ca.gov/) has many useful tools and sources of information. MyHazards (https://myhazards.caloes.ca.gov) helps you find hazards in your area. The biggest hazard at Mission Bay is liquefaction during an earthquake.

Also from the California Seismic Safety Commission is a list of things to do after an earthquake: https://ssc.ca.gov/disasters/after_earthquake. Note that most of this is covered in your VIEU Earthquake Brochure. If you can't find your copy you can pick one up in the main hall of the Clubhouse, just below the office window.

From the Federal Government we have a map of the latest earthquakes at https://earthquake.usgs.gov/earthquakes/map. You can zoom in to see particular areas, and, using the Settings tool (upper right on the screen), you can set the display for where, when and how strong the temblors to display.

Actionable and Healthy Resolutions for Seniors in 2024

As you map out your 2024 New Year's resolutions, focus on attainable goals that boost your health and overall quality of life. While resolutions will vary from individual to individual, below are seven positive ways to refocus your energy in 2024.

1. Keep a Positive Mindset
Research shows that maintaining a positive mindset comes with a host of health benefits. According to the findings, positivity has been linked to a lower risk of memory loss, quicker recovery from illness, injury or disability, a lower risk of chronic disease, decreased feelings of loneliness and isolation, and an increased likelihood for seeking preventative care.

Positive thinking doesn't mean wearing rose-colored glasses all the time or ignoring difficult feelings. Rather, it means stressing less about the things you cannot change, focusing on those you can, and, all the while, remembering what is good in life.

If you struggle to maintain a positive outlook with everything going on in the world, incorporate positive thinking exercises into your daily routine. Examples include making a gratitude list, practicing mindful breathing, and treating yourself as you would for a friend.

2. Commit to 10 Minutes of Exercise Daily
Staying active is not just the key to healthy aging, but also, it may be the key to a longer life. Though the research behind the positive effects of exercise on aging is extensive, the findings from a 30-year study effectively sum them up. Per the findings, incorporating an exercise regime of walking, jogging, or cycling in seniors can drastically improve physiological characteristics such as blood pressure, resting heart rate, maximum pumping capacity, and muscle mass. For some people, the improvements are so significant that baseline levels match those from their early 20s.

While you don't have to get up and run a marathon, you should dedicate a portion of your day to fitness. Just 10 minutes of swimming, walking, or yoga can make a huge difference in your health, happiness, and lifespan.

3. Make Better Dietary Choices
As you age, you will need to consume fewer calories but more nutrients. Your health care provider can help you make better food choices, but, ultimately, you should strive to eat at least five servings of fruits and vegetables per day. Choose whole grains over refined ones and lean meats over fatty options. Use healthier fats, such as olive or avocado oil, and cook with natural spices to reduce salt and fat intake.

4. Quit Smoking
It's never too late to quit smoking. Regardless of your current age, quitting now can reduce your risk of developing several health problems and improve your overall quality of life. For instance, individuals who quit smoking claim to have more energy, sleep better, and breathe easier.

5. Play With Your Grandkids
Though the reasons behind the phenomenon are multi-faceted, research shows that elderly individuals who spend more quality time with their grandchildren live longer and have better physical and mental health outcomes than those who do not. For instance, a 2016 study found that half of the grandparents who occasionally participated in their grandchildren's lives were alive five years post-study compared to individuals who had no involvement. Findings from a 2014 study showed that individuals who watched their grandchildren once a week scored higher on cognitive tests than those who never did.

6. Stimulate Your Mind
Regularly challenging your brain is one of the best ways to stay mentally sharp as you age. It's also one of the best ways to reduce your risk of memory loss or developing dementia. Simple things such as reading daily, doing crosswords, or joining a book club are great and fun ways to ensure your body's most important muscle receives an adequate workout.

7. Reach Out to Old Friends, and Make New Ones
Studies show that socially active older adults have better cognition, lower risks of disability and depression, and overall better health. Social media makes it easy to find and reach out to old friends, while elder living communities provide ample opportunity to make new ones.

Be intentional in your goal setting for 2024, if for no other reason than to make up for the time you lost in 2023. Use the aforementioned seven seniors' New Year's resolutions to guide you.

8 Ways to Age Gracefully - printed from Cheryl's Casual Chatter

It happens to all of us. We start getting old. But is it just me or does it just come out of nowhere? It seems like it was just yesterday, and I was forty and raising three teenagers. Now my oldest teenager is herself forty — boy that went fast.

But getting old has some perks too — grandchildren, senior discounts, happier outlook, and more wisdom. So we might as well settle in for the journey and try to enjoy every minute of it.

1. Keep a positive attitude-Forget all that negativity we always hear about getting old. Age is only a number. Just keep on keeping on. Surround yourself with happy, positive people. People who boost your spirits.

2. Shake your style up-Or better yet make up your own style. The thought used to be that after a certain age you needed to shorten your hair. Why would a woman be too old for long hair?

And what's with the idea that after forty women shouldn't wear capris? Wear what you like. Wear what makes you feel good.

3. Eat a healthy diet-Eat a diet filled with veggies, fruits, nuts, and whole grains. And eat less of fatty foods, salt, and sugar. A healthy diet can help you live longer and prevent heart disease and cancer.

I am a firm believer in you should still eat some of your not so healthy favorites now and then. But in moderation though.

4. Keep moving with regular exercise-Don't slow down just because you are getting older. No rule says just because you're in your 60's or 70's you have come to a halt. Take daily walks, lift some light weights, and try some yoga. Stay active. Try for at least thirty minutes a day. You have to move to keep moving.

6. Get enough sleep-Experts still recommend at least 7 hours of sleep each night. If you are like many you are finding as you age sometimes, it's not all that easy to get the required amount of sleep. It may help if you go to bed and get up in the mornings at the same times every day. Also, getting some regular exercise and spend time outside in the sun.

7. Stay hydrated –Dehydration can result in headaches and constipation. Even being mildly dehydrated can interfere with your mood, alertness and even your short-term memory.

8. Keep Learning-Take a computer class, an art class whatever your interests are. Learning new skills or starting a new hobby will keep your brain healthy and alert.

Medicare Changes In 2024: What's New?

from Forbes Health

Changes are coming to Medicare costs and coverage in 2024. It's crucial that enrollees stay informed about each year's developments. "[Beneficiaries] have to be actively involved in their health care," advises Darren Hotton, associate director of community health and benefits for the National Council on Aging. Failing to do so can cost you money, he adds.

Read on to learn about the biggest changes to Medicare in 2024 that are worth considering as you look at your plan options for the next year.

Medicare Part B Premiums and Deductibles Are Rising
Beginning Jan. 1, 2024, most U.S. residents enrolled in Original Medicare (Part A and Part B) or a Medicare Advantage plan must pay a standard Part B monthly premium of $174.70, an increase of $9.80 (or 5.9%) from 2023. The Part B annual deductible is also rising by $14 (or 6.2%) to $240.

Medicare beneficiaries whose income exceeds a certain amount must also pay a surcharge on their Part B premium known as an income-related monthly adjustment amount (IRMAA) ranging from $69.90 to $419.30—up from $65.90 to $395.60 in 2023. About 8% of Medicare beneficiaries are affected by IRMAA surcharges.

The annual income threshold at which the monthly adjustment kicks in is also increasing. Each year the Social Security Administration (SSA) uses data from two-year-old tax returns to assess whether a person must pay an IRMAA. For 2024, beneficiaries must pay an extra amount if their 2022 modified gross adjusted income reached $103,000 (or $206,000 if they file their taxes jointly with a spouse). The income threshold in 2023 sat at $97,000 (or $194,000 for those filing jointly). As with the Part B annual deductible, 2024's IRMAA thresholds represent a rise of 6.2%.

What Is Medicare Part B?
Medicare Part B is one of the two main sections of Original Medicare. While Medicare Part A provides coverage for hospitalizations and some home health care and hospice expenses, Part B covers the diagnosis and treatment of health conditions, along with preventative care like flu shots and doctor checkups.

Medicare Part B also covers ambulance services, durable medical equipment, limited outpatient prescription drugs, mental health care and participation in clinical research.

Part D Premiums May Be Dropping Slightly
The average monthly premium for a Medicare Part D prescription drug plan in 2024 is projected to dip to $55.50 from 2023's $56.49, according to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, or CMS. The 99-cent drop is attributed to policy changes made by the Inflation Reduction Act, which was signed by President Joe Biden in 2022.

As with Part B, about 8% of people with Medicare Part D coverage must pay an IRMAA ranging from $12.90 to $81 depending on the beneficiary's income from two years ago.

What Is Medicare Part D?

Medicare Part D is a type of optional Medicare plan that provides prescription drug coverage. All U.S. residents enrolled in Original Medicare, Original Medicare with a Medicare Supplement plan (Medigap) or a private Medicare Advantage plan that doesn't include a prescription drug benefit are eligible to enroll in a Part D plan.

Medicare Part D plans are administered by private health insurance companies approved by Medicare. Annual deductibles, monthly premiums and drug costs vary by policy.

"You should be looking at your drug coverage because plans change every year," says Hotton. "You should move back and forth to save money."

Review your plan annually to check whether your medications are still listed in the formulary and how their prices may have changed.

Other Medicare Part D Changes in 2024
Beginning in January 2024, Medicare Part D beneficiaries reach the catastrophic coverage level when their out-of-pocket and manufacturer-subsidized drug costs total $8,000. At that point, due to new Medicare rules, they're no longer subject to a 5% copay. According to one Medicare analysis conducted by KFF, that change caps beneficiaries' maximum out-of-pocket drug costs at about $3,300 for 2024. It's projected that out-of-pocket prescription drug costs will then be capped at $2,000 a year for 2025.

Meanwhile, more Medicare beneficiaries are eligible for income assistance to help pay for their health care in 2024. People with incomes of up to 150% of the federal poverty level can qualify for the Part D low-income subsidy benefit. (The 2023 threshold was 135% of the poverty level.) The low-income subsidy program, also known as Extra Help, pays the entire cost of the Part D annual deductible and monthly premium and lower costs for both generic and brand name drugs.

What's more, beginning in 2024, all adult vaccines covered by Medicare are available for free to beneficiaries. The cost for one month's supply of any insulin product is also capped at $35.

Expansion of Outpatient Mental Health Services
Medicare is expanding access to behavioral health services in 2024 as well. For the first time, mental health counselors and marriage and family therapists are eligible to enroll as Medicare providers. The move is meant to help beneficiaries coping with depression, anxiety or substance use disorders by making more professionals available to provide care.

Medicare is also extending its coverage of intensive outpatient programs for mental health come January. In its Medicare and You 2024 Handbook, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services says for these services, a beneficiary is responsible for 20% of the Medicare-approved amount along with their Part B deductible.

Coverage Added for Chronic Pain Treatment
People with chronic pain (pain lasting at least three months) can get coverage for pain control and management beginning in 2024.

Monthly services covered by Medicare include:

Pain assessment
Medication management
Care planning and coordination
Beneficiaries are responsible for paying their Part B deductible and the coinsurance for these services.

Telehealth Services Available in 2024 But Dwindling in 2025
Until Dec, 31, 2024, Medicare-covered telehealth services are available. After that date, however, most telehealth appointments will be covered only if you're in a medical facility or office in a rural location.

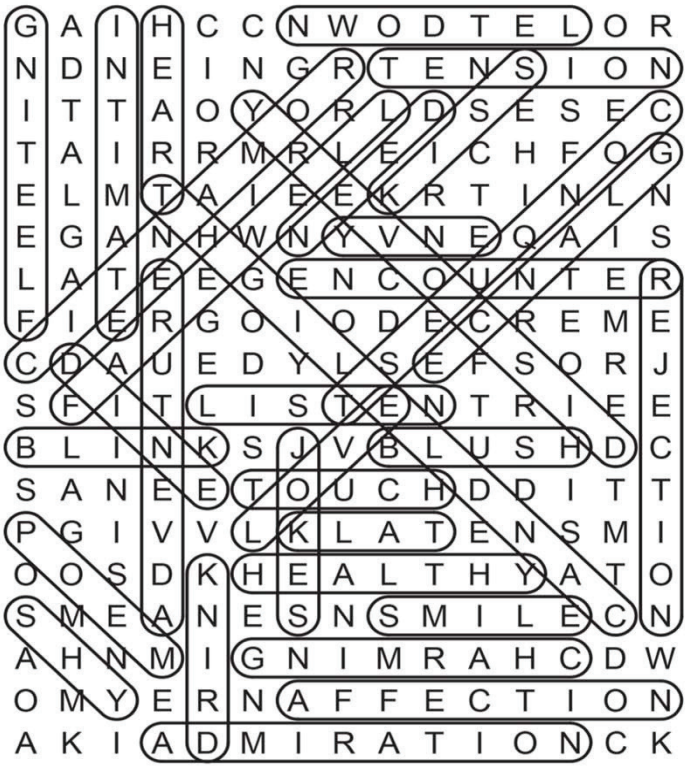

Some exceptions apply, including:

Behavioral health services
Treatment of a substance use disorder
Diagnosis, evaluation or treatment of a mental health disorder
Monthly end-stage renal disease visits for home dialysis
Medicare Advantage plans may provide other telehealth services, so check to see what your specific plan offers.

How to Find the Best Medicare Plan for You
For the most part, this year's Medicare changes are positive, says Hoton. "They're trying to round out Medicare (to be) something that is providing benefits across the board for everybody."

As you consider which Medicare coverage best suits your personal needs, be it Original Medicare, Original Medicare with a Medicare Supplement plan or a private Medicare Advantage plan, know that Medicare Advantage plans are legally required to cover everything Original Medicare covers with the exception of hospice care. With that said, some Medicare Advantage plans aren't available in every state, so focus on ones that are offered where you live.

To help you navigate your enrollment options, Hotton suggests contacting your local Senior Health Insurance Assistance Program, or SHIP, at shiphelp.org. This free government-funded service is available in every state and Washington, D.C., as well as Guam, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. You can also ask a family member or friend to step in and help you enroll directly via Medicare.gov.

Pruning Roses: 8 Steps for Healthy Rose Bushes

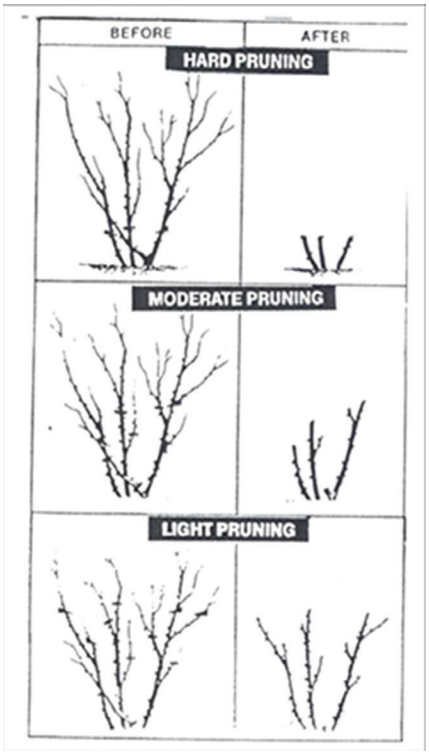

By Better Homes & Gardens

Always cut on a 45 degree angle about 1/4 inch above a swollen leaf node. This diagram shows us how its done...

Remove about one third of last years branch growth on each remaining branch. Sunset Magazine shows the illustration above

The recommended time to prune roses in Northern California is in January.

Even if plants are leafy or budding, it's good for plants to reset their growth cycle—which pruning stimulates. When you know the basics of pruning roses, even inexperienced gardeners can achieve beautiful results. Don't be intimidated by pruning—the rules and warnings are mainly for those who grow roses for specimens or exhibits. But for the casual gardener who simply wants beautiful, healthy rose bushes, there are really only a few fundamentals to follow.

What You'll Need
Equipment / Tools

1. Gardening gloves
2. Pruners
3. Rake
4. Cardboard box or dustpan
5. White glue (optional)

How to Prune Roses, Step by Step

Even after you decide how much you want to prune your roses, it can seem complicated to know where to start. Use the following steps to guide what you should remove in order of priority. Make all final cuts at a 45-degree angle above an outward-facing bud eye, pictured above. You don't need to seal most cuts because the plant will take care of that itself, but some gardeners like to use a dab of white glue on cut surfaces to help prevent disease and pest problems such as cane borers.

As you work through these cuts, remember that roses are vigorous plants that are hard to hurt. In most cases, new growth will quickly repair any mistakes you make. When you're all done, it's time for what may be the most difficult part: clean up. Raking clippings into a large makeshift dustpan, such as a cardboard box, is the easiest way. Then, you can step back and watch your roses thrive and bloom for another year.

1. Remove Dead Parts
Remove dead branches and canes. Cut back to live wood; it usually looks green on the outside.

2. Prune Branches
Prune diseased or damaged branches back to healthy wood.

3. Remove Crossed Branches
Clip away branches that cross through the center of the plant.

4. Clear Weak Growth
Remove any growth that is much thinner or weaker than the rest.

5. Remove Suckers
Remove suckers from the base of grafted roses.

6. Eliminate Old Growth
Take out older woody growth, unless it would thin out the plant too much.

7. Prevent Rubbing
If any remaining branches rub against each other, cut away the smaller ones.

8. Shape Plants
Shape plants to taste, adjusting the overall height and width. Shaping the plant's top into a rounded dome rather than a flat top encourages flowering from top to bottom.
